

April 20, 1939.

Mrs. Joanne Dago,
409 Edgecome Ave.,
New York City.

Dear Jeanne:

I am enclosing you a check for a dollar for the book, so glad to send it, certainly hope I win a prize. I am going to make every effort possible to be there, at this time I do not see any reason why I should not be able to. The League season opens a short time later so that of course means I am pretty busy.

Mother and Dad stayed with Sadie that night, I would have called you back if I had had to.

I have been to New York several times, called you each time, but you are out an awful lot. Do not feel badly because I do not get to see you, I am just pretty tied up. Still love you just the same.

Sincerely yours,

EM:CCJ